The raid in 2009 in which agents raided the home of Thomas "Teddy" Mungo — who had bought the business as early as 2004 when he opened it in Hagerstown — had resulted in seven U.S. arrests and a conviction of one person.. U.S. District Judge Jeffrey Hellerstein in Washington approved a demand by Homeland Security Investigations that CBP take possession of and turn over a laptop seized during the raid, as well as a copy of bank records related to the property.. The raid of Mungo's home, on St. Helena Street in Westlake, was part of the Justice Department's ongoing investigation into the allegations of civil money laundering against Mungo.. The judge's order says the $200,000 should go to victims of Mungo's business, with a portion going to help the victims apply for unemployment compensation or other benefits. The other $40,000 is for the government to compensate other "victim-based" clients of M. PDF..
